

What could you do with 51 more days before you need to pay your suppliers?

An RBC® credit card program can improve your working capital so you can invest more in your business.

Control

Steer your own course

- Order & cancel your own cards
- Set individual limits and pool corporate credit in real-time
- Block purchases from certain merchant types

Insights

Information to make fueled business decisions

- Analyze spending patterns to enhance forecasting
- Streamline expense tracking and customize reporting
- Integrate data with expense management systems

Rewards

Gear up for a program that works best

- Choose a payment option that rewards your spend
- Earn cash back or rewards for travel & merchandise
- Choose corporate or individual points ownership

Companies in your industry use their RBC credit card program for:
Parts & Equipment • Marketing & Advertising • Shipment Costs
Office Supplies • Travel & Sales Expenses

Talk to your Commercial Account Manager about payment solutions to give your cash management a boost.

* 51 more days refers to the maximum number of interest-free days before you must pay your RBC credit card after a purchase is made (based on a card with a 17 day grace period). To achieve this you must use your credit card to pay your supplier and ensure the payment is posted immediately after your statement closes. For more information about interest-free days and the timing of payments, speak with your account manager.